HOTELS MAY OPEN SUNDAYS

Liquor licenses granting the special privilege of keeping open during certain hours on Sunday and requiring closing at 1 a. m. on week days were granted by the license board yesterday to the Alexander Young, Moana and Haleiwa hotels, the Union Grill and the Waikiki Inn. Selling hours on Sunday were as follows: 6:30 a. m. to 8 a. m., 11:30 a. m. to 2 p. m. and 5:30 p. m. to 9 p. m.

Chairman Cooke objected to granting a license to McTigue & Co., but on the statement of Attorney Peters, for Mrs. McTigue, that the corporation desired to sell the saloon, the board granted a license for three months during which time the present owners are to dispose of the business.

A wholesale license was granted F. A. Schaefer & Co., Ltd., and second-class licenses were issued to P. F. Ryan, Occidental Hotel; Charles Lambert, Anchor Saloon; Joseph Wind, Aiea; J. I. Silva, Pantheon Saloon, and Nakatani & Kurisaki, Aiea Saloon.

At the next meeting of the board, to be held tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock, the proprietor of the Kihuna Saloon will be called on the carpet to explain how he happened to sell liquor to an intoxicated man on June 19. The license of J. P. Medeiros of Waihiua also will be discussed.

BEST DINING CAR PLANT.
The Pennsylvania Railroad's base of supplies for its dining car service is in the Sunnyside yards, Long Island City. The "Railroad Men's Magazine" says it is the largest and best equipped dining car plant in the world. In it is kept everything from a toothpick to the carcass of beef. A list of supplies issued one day recently to conductors by the storekeeper included 200 varieties of foods, drinks, cigars, cigarettes and miscellaneous articles, such as linen, cooking utensils, silverware and crockery.

The Man He Licked

By OSCAR COX

Johnny Atherton was intellectual rather than muscular. He led his class in college, while his elder brother, Tom Atherton, led the football team. Johnny was a demure little chap. Everybody liked him, and nobody ever thought of calling him anything but Johnny, while his brother was spoken of as Tom Atherton, with a resonance denoting respect for his building strength.

Mildred Twining met Johnny away from his home and conceived a great liking for him. Johnny fell deeply in love with her and proposed to her. But there was one thing wanting in him that Mildred wished in a husband, and on this account his case hung fire. She wanted a man with Johnny's intellect and delectable gentleness, but with a latent strength that might be aroused on occasion. Johnny begged hard for a favorable answer to his suit, but could not induce the girl to give it to him. However, she had a friend in the town where he lived whom she had promised to visit and told Johnny that when she arrived he might come to see her. This gave him a faint hope that she might relent.

But when Mildred appeared and Johnny renewed his pleadings he received the same reply, and she told him frankly that he was everything she required save that courage and strength that a woman craves in her protector. Johnny went home and poured his disappointment into his brother's sympathetic ear. Tom, who did not at all value his vigor and would have gladly exchanged it for his brother's intellectual and winning qualifications, sympathized with him deeply. The two talked the matter over, and Tom wished he could transfer enough of his blacksmithian traits to Johnny to enable him to win the prize he coveted. However, he said something to the latter that put an idea into his head.

One morning Johnny and Mildred were strolling idly together through the suburban town in which the former lived, Johnny pleading, Mildred putting him off for the same reason as before. Approaching a house where a man sat smoking and looking out through an open window, he glanced at the coming couple, arose from his chair and emerged from the front door in time to meet them. As he passed he looked indignantly at Mildred and said: "You're a beauty, but you've got a measly chap for a fellow."

The blood rushed into Mildred's cheeks. But before she could show any further resentment Johnny jumped for the insult and landed a blow on his chin. The man who received it was large and strong, but he cowered before Johnny.

"A man who will insult a lady," said Johnny with a ring of courage in his voice that had never been heard there before, "is a coward, and if I am a measly chap I can whip even as big a coward as you."

With that Johnny went at the fellow like a fury. His enemy seemed to lose all sense of advantage of his steel muscles and was so slow in his movements that Johnny got in three blows to his nose. And whenever he aimed one that would have finished Johnny the latter sprang nimbly aside.

Mildred looked on this singular encounter astonished. As she gazed Johnny planted a blow on her insulator's jaw that sent him sprawling. Johnny jumped on him and held him down glaring at him like a demon.

"Hand me that stone, please," Johnny said to Mildred, "and I'll smash his head to a jelly."

"I'll do no such thing," was the reply. "Do you want to be hanged for murder?"

"Murder? Is it murder to kill a dog? I'm going to gouge his eyes out!" And Johnny put his thumbs to the sides of his enemy's eyes. The man seemed to have lost all power to save himself and looked up at his little enemy in terror. Mildred, dreading to see his eyes gouged out and to save her lover from such a horrid crime, took him by the collar and dragged him off his enemy. The craven slunk away, Johnny calling after him:

"You keep out of my way after this if you don't want to get killed. The next time I run across you I'm going to finish the job. I'd do it now if it weren't for the intercession of the young lady you insulted."

The man said nothing, apparently desirous of putting distance between him and his fierce little enemy as quickly as possible.
